Concept Note

Women are an integral part of society. It is said that the position of women in a society reflects its position on the ladder of progress. As India is close to completing seventy five years of independence, this seminar shall aim to explore how the situation of women in India has changed over these years. As a nation's growth can't be seen from a single perspective, similarly the position of women has to be analysed in diverse contexts. As a country progresses in its political, administrative, technological, social and cultural spheres, it becomes imperative to analyse the role of women in these structures. It will be interesting to look at contributions of women and commensurate returns in terms of progressive societal norms, access to education, healthcare, technology and finance, amongst others. The position of women in Indian society in juxtaposition to other countries, is another important aspect of the study. The seminar shall focus on change in the role of women in India since independence, exploring and evaluating their contributions in the country's political landscape, economy and society. This interdisciplinary seminar will also explore and analyse methods to improve the agency of women in order to establish gender equality in India.
