MBA Learnings

Mba taught me self believe as during mba there were lot of times where I was supposed to push my limits off. I always thought I was not strong enough to face too much pressure, lonely times and will definitely succumb at such situations. Mba paved me the way for self reflection helping me learn alot of things about myself, most importantly that I can very well sustain and be happy in adverse and challenging situations also. So entering my new phase of life post MBA with a lot more confidence and optimistic attitude. 18:09

Also learnt the most important thing in my life from Bakshi sir's class

As long as we are held by incentives (eg salary which depends on other people) and are not financially independent to the extent we want to, we will never find enough time to devote for self-satisfaction (eg being wise through extensive reading) and why it is so important to reach a stage where you dont work for money but money works for you. 18:44

What else

I think mba is not waste of money. Its not abt just academics. You learn discipline in some forms. Also the money spent is for an upgradation of ur societal respect. And that's a huge responsibility which needs to be justified through meaningful actions 18:31

Other things learnt -

1. You have to be good enough. If you are not, you will be sidelined.
2. There is a fine line between pfa and making sense. People can catch it very easily. And a well read person can only make sense. And hence respected by all 15:28

1. You need to prioritise
2. MBA made me shock-proof for any situation in life. I don't take time to digest the problem or cry over WHY it has happened. I skip to what can be done now.

As you might know I have an insta page to help CAT aspirants. So to motivate them I...

Getting to know yourself better and finding your own niche. Professionally and personally :) 14:59

MBA as an education degree is a scan. It is more of a personality development course. What you learn out of it is problem solving and being independent 14:52

Scam* 14:52

Like if there is a problem posed to you ..you have to solve it..you can't run away from it..you can't give any excuses (like I don't know how to do this, this wasn't taught to me, this is new etc) 14:54

You have net with you ..search about it ..collect all the resources ..if you have to do it then you have to do it...AND SO YOU CAN DO ANYTHING 14:55
