A group discussion on the topic "Peace as an Interdisciplinary Subject" was organized by the Peace Club of Mata Sundri College for Women on 25th September at Bebe Nanki Hall. The event was conducted successfully under the guidance of the Convenor, Dr. Neetu Sharma, and the Co-Convenor, Dr. Moitri Dey.

The event was graced by the presence of Dr. Manoj from Universal Peace Federation, who delivered the inaugural address. In his speech, he inspired the youth with his powerful insights on world peace and highlighted their potential as agents of societal transformation.

Following the introductory session, the competition commenced with a clear briefing on rules and procedures. The discussion witnessed enthusiastic participation from students who engaged meaningfully with the idea of peace studies as an emerging discipline. The participants were presented with questions that guided the flow of the discussion. Throughout the session, students articulated a wide range of perspectives. They underscored the significance of narratives, stories, and poetry in nurturing empathy and cross-cultural understanding, while also stressing the importance of mental well-being, emotional regulation, and conflict management in fostering peace at both individual and societal levels. Furthermore, they brought attention to the role of equitable resource distribution and sustainable development in mitigating social tensions. The dialogue remained highly interactive, encompassing not only the sharing of viewpoints but also critical debates on challenges such as systemic inequalities, cultural barriers, and global conflicts. Collectively, the deliberations reflected the interdisciplinary nature of peace studies, affirming that sustainable peace necessitates contributions from multiple domains working in harmony.

The session concluded with the announcement of results and a reflective address by Dr. Moitri Dey who emphasized the necessity of cultivating peace-oriented thinking in both academic pursuits and personal lives. Peace Club reaffirmed its commitment to organizing similar events in the future, with the aim of fostering dialogue, collaboration, and active student engagement in nurturing a culture of peace.
